To whom it may concern:

From September 2015 to February 2016, Pimchanok Sripraphan ("Toey") was employed as junior UX designer at our subsidiary company in Thailand (YogaTrail Asia).

In this brief time, I worked very closely with Toey, and was consistently astounded by her intelligence, creativity, as well as her diligent and self-motivated work ethic. She came to us straight out of university, but literally within days she was able to impress the entire team with great, carefully considered, and innovative wireframes and designs that completely matched the existing look and feel of our website.

In addition, Toey proved herself to be very reliable, very versatile, and able to handle pretty much any task that was handed to her – professionally, quickly, and with the big picture in mind.

Toey was a great pleasure to work with, and I know everyone on our team feels the same way. In fact, she introduced a number of "rituals" and cultural elements into our company that she independently came up with to bring us all closer together and make the workplace more fun and enjoyable. We were sad to see her go when she was accepted to graduate school in Germany.

In short, I can enthusiastically recommend Ms. Sripraphan as someone to trust and work with, and believe she would shine as a very bright star in any commercial or academic setting.

Sincerely,

Alexander J. Klein
